

<sup>1</sup>EQUALITIES IMPACT ASSESSMENT (EIA) GUIDANCE

Introduction

Statutory duties have been introduced to encourage a proactive approach to the promotion of equal opportunities. These duties are introduced by:

- The Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000: The Race Equality Duty, enforced April 2001
- The Disability Discrimination Act 2005: The Disability Equality Duty, enforced December 2006
- The Equality Act 2006: The Gender Equality Duty, enforced April 2007.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights (CEHR)

- CEHR will begin on 1 October 2007
- Race, gender, disability AND sexual orientation, religion or belief and age
- Significant - first time there will be an enforcement body to take forward cases on sexual orientation, religion and belief and age.

The legislation for race, disability and gender requires us to carry out general and specific duties in relation to equality. Within this legislation it states a statutory duty to carry out Equalities Impact Assessments (EIA).

Please note the word ‘activity’ will be used throughout this guidance to cover any policy, procedure, strategy, proposal, function etc

What is an Equality Impact Assessment?

An EIA is a tool to improve the work of an organisation by making sure it does not discriminate and where possible, it promotes equality. It is a way to make sure staff think carefully about the likely impact of their work on equality groups and take action to improve strategies and initiatives where it has a negative impact. It involves anticipating the consequences of the Council’s activities on different sections of the community, making sure that, as far as possible, any negative impacts are minimised or eliminated and that opportunities for promoting equality are maximised.

Within this process each service should identify and include all of the activities it undertakes on behalf of the Council including the policies, procedures and strategies etc associated with that given activity.

An EIA should be conducted in the manner of a risk assessment, which involves predicting and assessing what the implications of the ‘activity’ are likely to be. All effort must be made to consider the impact on, as wide a range of people and their varied needs as possible.

Cross cutting issues may apply when assessing positive or negative impacts. Identifying any cross cutting issues will allow officers completing the EIA to pin point more accurately those people who could be particularly affected by any negative impacts that the ‘activity’ may have. This is important because cross cutting issues can act to heighten any potential disadvantages the equality target groups may experience. The effect of cross cutting issues on negative impacts should be thought of as layers which have a compounding effect on each other making a person increasingly more vulnerable to discrimination.

Examples of cross-cutting issues:-

- Rural isolation and geographic location
- Low income
- Disability

Who should carry it out?

It is advised to conduct EIA by using a group of people who are aware of the activity and its associated policies etc, its intentions, and how it affects members of the public. Involvement could include policy makers, frontline staff, specialist staff, individuals from equality target groups etc.

- Utilise the knowledge and expertise of staff/management
- Analyse the outcomes of previous consultations
- Analyse previous complaints, comments, evaluations and monitoring processes
- Analyse research/reports; including new research being published
- Seek advice from internal/external specialists in related fields and/or those staff who have been involved in the implementation of previous 'activity' in the area under analysis

When should it be done?

Once all existing activities etc have been assessed an EIA should be carried out when:

- Developing a new policy, function, procedure etc
  - Reviewing existing policies, functions, procedures etc
- All managers are responsible for incorporating equalities into their areas of work.

An EIA is an ongoing process rather than a one-off exercise. The outcomes and recommendations of the assessment should be fed into the future developments of the activity. It is important to remember that any modification must also go through the EIA process.

Do not be deterred from continuing the EIA if there are deficits in information; note what they are and carry on to gain completion of the assessment. In some instances it may be that we do not know what the impact will be on every group.

Impact and Relevance

High relevance – implies that there is lots of evidence or concern about negative impacts on different groups.

Medium relevance – implies that there is some evidence or concern about negative impacts on different groups.

Low relevance – implies that there is little evidence or concern about negative impacts on different groups.

No relevance – implies that there is no evidence or concern about negative impact on different groups

Consultation

All EIA should include consultation with relevant stakeholders to ensure that no unjustified negative impact on any particular group or groups of people occurs.

An equalities consultation forum is being developed corporately to scrutinise all impact assessments, in addition to any consultation departments carry out.

Recommendations and Monitoring Procedures

It is essential that the recommendations elicited from the EIA are acted upon, this will involve the development of an action plan with named lead officers and time-scales.

A copy of all signed EIA must be sent to the Equal Opportunities Officer.

Glossary of terms (with examples where appropriate)

Impact Assessment: The goal of impact assessments is for the authority to be enabled to gauge, audit and assess how the existing or proposed 'activity' will effect communities including equality groups.

'Activity': is everything that we do as an employer and service provider. We must identify and impact assess all the activities that we undertake on behalf of the Council including the policies, procedures, strategic plans, projects, proposals for service provision/change, care plans, service plans, single shared assessments, carer assessments etc. associated with that given activity.

Positive Impact: A positive impact is an impact that could improve equal opportunities and / or relations between different groups. Positive impacts are permissible but you must always be able to demonstrate that positive impacts are justifiable in law and do not amount to discrimination for any other group.

Negative Impact: A negative impact is an impact that could disadvantage one or more groups. This disadvantage may have a greater impact on one group than another.

Direct Discrimination: Treating a person less favourably than another on any grounds, including those of race, disability, gender, sexual orientation, religious belief or age.

Example: A forklift operator discovers that her male job-share partner is being paid a higher salary than she is although they both have the same range of skills and experience and perform the same tasks. When she approaches her manager to ask why this is the case she is told that the other member of staff is more senior in age than her; and it has always been company policy to pay those who are older in age more money. This comes under the Employment Equality Act (Age) Regulations 2006 and may also come under the Equal Pay Act (1970) if it is found that only more "senior" male forklift operators are paid more.

Indirect Discrimination: The application of a 'provision, criterion or practice' that puts groups of people or individuals at a particular disadvantage and can not be shown to be a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim.

Example: A security firm advertises for staff and includes a height requirement of 6ft 2ins. This is indirect discrimination because men are normally taller than women, therefore the height requirement puts women at a particular disadvantage when compared to men. This also discriminates against races where men and women are on average smaller in stature, e.g., those of Chinese decent. Comes under Gender Equality and Race Equality. The legislation underpinning these are the Sex Discrimination Act (1975) amended (1986). Also comes under the Race Relations Act 1976 and Race Relations (Amendment) Act (2000).

Harassment: Harassment is conduct that violates a person's dignity or creates a hostile, intimidating, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.

Example: A lecturer whose son is gay and attends the College where his father works, frequently has comments made to him by both staff and students on his son's sexual orientation. Comes under the Human Rights Act (1998) and the Scotland Act (1998).

Victimisation: Victimise a person because they have made or intend to make a complaint or seek to ascertain the right they have or, have given or intended to give evidence in relation to a complaint of discrimination.

Example: A worker gives evidence for a colleague who has brought an Employment Tribunal claim against the organisation of discrimination on the grounds of race. When the worker applies for a promotion to a management position, his manager tells him that they are rejecting his application because he is viewed as a "troublemaker" and, consequently, not suitable management material. Comes under the Human Rights Act (1998) and the Scotland Act (1998).
